United Nations Population Award

2021 Edition

United Nations Population Award

The United Nations General Assembly established the United Nations Population Award in resolution 36/201 on 17 December 1981. The Award is presented annually to an individual or individuals, or to an institution or institutions, or to any combination thereof, for the most outstanding contribution to the awareness of population questions or to their solutions.

The Committee for the United Nations Population Award selects the laureates of the Award. The Committee is composed of ten representatives of Members States of the United Nations (Côte d'Ivoire, the Republic of Fiji, The Gambia, Iceland, the Republic of Indonesia, Lebanon, the Republic of Liberia, Panama, Romania, and the Republic of Trinidad and Tobago) elected by the Economic and Social Council for a term of three years (2019-2021).

Laureates of the 2021 Award

1. Individual

Commissaire Hassane Haousseize Zouera of Niger, is a champion of women and children's rights. She coordinates the work of the 107 police brigades spread across the country and leads the Division for the Protection of Minors and Women, which contributes to the design of national policies in the area of gender-based violence (GBV). Commissaire Zouera has grown into a leading advocate with the ability to mobilize resources to build the capacity of the national police force to combat GBV including but not limited to victim interviews, reporting, data collection and analysis. On the foundation of this work, Niger's police force has now built a strong reputation for its data collection on GBV and its support to victims. Commissaire Zouera has also ensured that her Division invests in strong collaboration with traditional and community leaders across the country for the prevention, identification, and support to victims of GBV. She also ensures that programmes which target children and youth in street situations who are at risk of pre-delinquency are implemented. Commissaire Zouera also serves on national committees which contribute to addressing issues affecting refugees in Niger, including resettlement and their empowerment through education.

2. Institution

Dirección General de Población de Oaxaca (DIGEPO) of Mexico, is a decentralized public institution created in 1998 to implement the population policy at the local level in Oaxaca. Its primary aim is to build awareness of population issues and help design sound public policy instruments. A key deliverable produced by DIGEPO is the Gender Atlas of Oaxaca, a diagnostic instrument that documents quality of life of women in terms of gender equality and the extent of the existence of constraints which affect the ability of women to fully exercise their human rights. This diagnosis serves to build remedial policies to improve women's physical, economic, and political autonomy. DIGEPO also helps curb adolescent pregnancy by coordinating the State's responses, and by sharing best practices, advocacy tools, and educational materials on this issue. DIGEPO also utilises demographic data to identify the regions with high rates of adolescent pregnancy in order to better target the provision of services. Additionally, DIGEPO seeks to highlight the unique needs of indigenous, Afro-Mexican and aging population groups, given that there is a need to continue to amplify their needs, rights and dignity within the context of development and implementation of public policy. DIGEPO engages in interventions geared towards HIV prevention through the development of information materials to support advocacy efforts. Finally, DIPEGO also generates analyses of the impacts of public policy on the social, economic, and environmental areas of sustainable development in relation to monitoring progress towards the implementation of the global 2030 Agenda for Sustainable Development.
